Sasford Men Attempt to Take Credentials by Force.

LONG ISLAND CITY, L. I., Dec. 7. Exciting Republican primaries were held in this city last night. The fight was between the Sanford faction and the faction opposed to Mayor Sanford.

The First Ward election was carried by the anti-Sanfordites. The primaries the Second and Third Wards were carried by the Republicans favorable to a riot. A very bitter fight took place there, two meetings being held.

to the other meeting and appointed two inspectors.

The two factions came together in the same hall and made a bitter contest as to who should be recognized as the regular Republican faction. Amid much excitement the anti-Sanfordites carried the ecction by a vote of 40 to 32.

A delegation of Sanford men, headed by Aldeman E. J. Knauer and Charles H. Smith, Secretary of the Improvement Commission, demanded back their credentials and when this was refused they undertook to take the credentials by force. For a time it looked like a general fight, but as a squad of policemen were present a serious disturbance was prevented.

The cause of the contest was the move-

Arthur J. Heaney, who is one of the Aldermen under indictment for participating in the alleged Columbian celebration frauds, appeared before the Commission this morning and told Mayor Boody that he desired to contradict and explain some statements that had been made. The little Alderman was sworn, and after Mayor Boody had repeated the substance of Daverell's testimony, he said:

IMITATED DR. CARVER.

Burlingham Demanded Free Prinks and Then Began to Shoot.

Michael Burlingham, a machinist, of 159 North Sixth atreet, was held in the Lee Avenue Court, Williamsburg, to-day on a charge of attempting to kill Samuel Smith a bartender for Louis Jackson, of North Fifth street and Bedford avenue.

Last night Burlingham went into the galoon and suggested to Smith the advisability of setting up free drinks. Smith did not see it that way, and said as much.

"How many Brooklyn bandmasters were there? Could you give us their names?"
"There were so many that I couldn't tell. They came from different points; some as far away as Rondout. I remember that Connor, Lent and McGarry were among the number."

ber that Connor, Lent and McGarry were among the number."

"How many men were there?"

"The dining-room was full of them," the Alderman replied, becoming nettled. "And you passed all the money to Deverall?"

"What do you men by that?" shouted the witness, "It seems strange that a man can be brought here and cate-chized as a common thief. I have lived nere thirty years and have never been treated this way until I came here."

"Mr. Deverall didn't bring his receipts and couldn't give us the information we wanted," said Mayor Boody. "We are trying to get at the number of bonds; Mr. Deverall's memory is very hazy." Mr. Greenwood said, trying to sooth the Alderman.

"But what did you mean by your last remark? I've produced Deverall's research."

"But what did you mean by your last remark? I've produced Deverall's re-celpt. Here it is. Read it! Read it! Heaney fairly shouted, as he thrust the papers in Greenwood's hands. "You'll be a little careful in the fu-ture." continued Heaney. "I don't want you to put such questions to me, and I won't have it. Do you understand, Mr. Greenwood, I won't allow it." Heaney was standing on his feet and great beads of perspiration coursed down his brow.

Mr. Greenwood, however, explained that when he asked whether Heaney had given Deverall all the money, he wanted to ascertain whether Denerall had paid the musicians or whether the Alderman paid some of them. Mr.

Heaney subsided.

Mr. Greenwood then questioned Heaney about the stands erected by the mysterious "P. Hoss." The witness repeated the story he has told before at the trials of some of the other indicted officials.

"If it was proven to you that the materials in the stands cost only $4,000, and the contract price was $11,000, would you consider Mr. Ross had deceived the committee?" Mayor Boody asked.

Heaney gave an evasive reply. The question being repeated, he answered.

"I wouldn't believe such testimony."

After City Auditor Weber had assured Heaney that no reflections had been cast upon his reputation, he was exupon his reputation, he was ex-
